T he relationship between Brazil and Australia is developing into a strategic partnership as both countries see opportunities to strengthen ties in areas such as law, science, research, and education. While Brazil has had a long history as a country of origin for law students, Mr DeGaris says the formal setting up of research and teaching collaborations in Brazil will help the relationship between Australia and Brazil develop into a strategic partnership.

Mr DeGaris is now teaching law, research and construction process, the rooftop – representing innovation in design, research and construction processes, according to MELASSESE’s Stephen Tan. Ongoing research and the design success of the Burnley Green Roof will now be used to promote technical knowledge for architects, landscape designers and public policy makers to install green roofs around the world.
